

DAILY NATIONAL 12/29/1858

THE DAILY NATIONAL.

EXTRA

SAN FRANCISCO, MONDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1858.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

When we compare the condition of the country at the present day with what it was one year ago, at the meeting of Congress, we have every reason to gratify to that Almighty Providence, which has never failed to interpose for our relief, at the most critical periods of history. One year ago, the southern strife between the South and the South on the subject of slavery, had again become so acute as to threaten the peace and prosperity of the confederacy. The application for the admission of Kansas as a State into the Union, fostered this unhappy strife; and though the whole subject was once more before Congress, it was the unanimous voice of every patriot that such measures of legislation might be adopted as would remove the excitement from the States, and confine it to the territory where it legitimately belonged. Much has been done, I am happy to say, towards the accomplishment of this object, during the last session of Congress.

The Supreme Court of the United States had previously decided, that all American citizens have an equal right to take into their Territories, whatever is held as property under the laws of any of the States, and to such property there under the guardianship of the federal constitution, as long as the territorial conditions shall remain.

This is now a well-established position, and the proceedings of the last session were slope waiting to effect its practical effect. The principle has been recognized, in some form or other, by almost unanimous vote of both houses of Congress, that a Territory has a right to come into the Union either as a free or a slave State, according to the will of its people. The just equality of all the States has thus been vindicated, and a faithful source of dangerous dissension among them has been removed.

Whilst such has been the beneficial tendency of your legislative proceedings outside of Kansas, their influence has nowhere been so happy as within that Territory itself. Left to ingenuity and capital to make its own way, without the pressure of external influence, the result of popular government and all its relations to the territorial government established by Congress, has been finally abandoned. An unnatural consequence, that fine Territory now appears to be tranquil and prosperous, and is attracting increasing thousands of immigrants to make it their happy home.

The past unfortunate experience of Kansas has enforced the lesson so often already taught, that resistance to lawful authority, under our form of government, cannot fail in the end to prove disastrous to its author. Had the people of the Territory yielded obedience to the laws enacted by their Legislature, it would at the present moment have contained a large and populous population of independent and enterprising citizens, who have been deterred from entering its borders by the existence of civil strife and organized rebellion.

It was the resistance to rightful authority, and the persevering attempt to establish a revolutionary government under the Topeka constitution, which caused the people of Kansas to commit that grave error of refusing to vote for delegates to the convention to frame a constitution, and to be denied a seat in the House of Representatives. This refusal to vote has been the prolific source of all the evils which have followed. Is their hostility to the fact, that the object would have been much sooner attained, and the pacification of Kansas more speedily effected, had it been admitted as a State during the last session of Congress.

My recommendation, however, for the immediate admission of Kansas, failed to meet the approval of Congress. They deemed it wiser to adopt a different method for settling the question. For my own part, I should have been willing to yield my entire interest to almost any constitutional measure to accomplish this object. I, therefore, cordially acquiesced in what has been called the English Compromise, and approved the "Act for the admission of the State of Kansas into the Union" upon the term therein prescribed.

Under the ordinance which accompanied the Lecompton constitution, the people of Kansas had claimed double the quantity of public lands for the support of common schools, which had ever been previously granted to any State upon entering the Union; and also the alternate sections of land for twelve miles on each side of two railroads, proposed to be constructed in the northern portion of the state, to a total width of twenty-four miles. Every patriot who such measure of legislation might be adopted as would remove the excitement from the States, and confine it to the territory where it legitimately belonged. Much has been done, I am happy to say, towards the accomplishment of this object, during the last session of Congress.

The Supreme Court of the United States had means of establishing military posts and promoting settlements along the route.

I recommended that the benefits of our land laws and pre-emption system be extended to the people in the new Territories, by the establishment of a land office in that Territory.

I have cordially also, to congratulate you on the result of negotiations with China.

You were informed by my last annual message, that our minister had been instructed to occupy a neutral position in the hostilities conducted by Great Britain and France against China. He was, however, at the same time, directed to co-operate cordially with the British and French ministers, in all peaceful measures to secure by treaty those concessions to foreign commerce, which the nations of the world had a right to demand. It was impo-sible for me to proceed further than this, to my knowledge, in the preparation of this act, to secure any particular result in any single instance, but we may except the case of the Black Warrior under the late administration; and that presented an opportunity, as a character as would have justified a similar resort to war. All our attempts to restrain others have been unavailing.

The frequent and oft-recurring changes in the Spanish ministry, have been employed as reasons for delay. We have been compelled to wait, again and again, until the new minister should have had time to investigate the justice of our claims.

Even when we have demanded the Cuban claims, in which more than a hundred of our countrymen directly interested, have furnished no exception. These claims were for the refunding of dues unjustly exacted from American vessels at the Spanish custom-houses in Cuba, so long ago as the year 1844. The principle upon which they rest are so manifestly equitable and just, that after a period of nearly ten years, in 1854, they were recognized by the Spanish government. Proceedings were afterwards instituted to ascertain their amount, and this was finally fixed according to their own statement (with which we were satisfied), at the sum of one hundred and twenty-eight thousand six hundrad and thirty-five dollars and fifty-four cents.

Just at the moment, after a delay of fourteen years, when we had reason to expect that this sum would be repaid with interest, we have received a prompt offer to refund one-third of the amount, namely,

two thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight dol-ars and forty-one cents, but without interest. If we would accept this in satisfaction, the offer is accompanied by a declaration that this indemnity is founded on any reason of strict justice, but is made as a special favor.

The alleged cause for procrastination in the examination and adjustment of our claims, arises from an obstacle which it is the duty of the Spanish Government to remove. Whilst the Captain-General of Cuba is invested with general despotic authority in the government of that island the power is withheld from him to examine and redress wrongs committed by officials under his control, or citizens of the United States.

Instead of making our complaints directly to him,

Havana, we are obliged to present them through our Minister at Madrid. These are then referred back to the Captain-General for information; and much time is thus consumed in preliminary investigation and correspondence between Madrid and Cuba, before the Spanish government will consent to proceed to negotiation. Many of the differences between the two governments have been numerous of the murder, imprisonment, and plunder of our citizens, by different parties claiming and exercising a local jurisdiction; but the central government, although repeatedly tried thereto, have made no effort either to punish the authors of these outrages or prevent their recurrence. No American citizen can now visit Mexico on lawful business, without exposing himself to dangerous and hostile injuries.

This question was recently settled.

treasures which I need not enumerate.

The mission to Spain has been intrusted to a distinguished citizen of Kentucky, who will proceed to Madrid without delay, and make another and a final attempt to obtain justice from that government.

Spanish officials, under the direct control of the captain-general of Cuba, have insulted our national flag, and, in repeated instances, have from time to time inflicted injury on the persons and property of our citizens. These have given birth to numerous claims against the Spanish government, the merits of which have been fully discussed by our representatives. Notwithstanding this, we have not arrived at any practical result in any single instance,

but we may except the case of the Black Warrior

under the late administration; and that presented

an opportunity, as a character as would have justified

a similar resort to war. All our attempts

to restrain others have been

unavailing.

The frequent and oft-recurring changes in the Spanish ministry, have been employed as reasons for delay. We have been compelled to wait, again and again, until the new minister should have had time to investigate the justice of our claims.

Even when we have demanded the Cuban

claims, in which more than a hundred of our

countrymen directly interested, have furnished no exception. These claims were for the refunding of

dues unjustly exacted from American vessels at

the Spanish custom-houses in Cuba, so long ago as the

year 1844. The principle upon which they rest

are so manifestly equitable and just, that after a period of nearly ten years, in 1854, they were recognized by the Spanish government. Proceedings

were afterwards instituted to ascertain their amount,

and this was finally fixed according to their own

statement (with which we were satisfied), at the sum

of one hundred and twenty-eight thousand six hun-

drad and thirty-five dollars and fifty-four cents.

Just at the moment, after a delay of fourteen years,

when we had reason to expect that this sum would

be repaid with interest, we have received a prompt

offer to refund one-third of the amount, namely,

two thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight dol-

ars and forty-one cents, but without interest. If we

would accept this in satisfaction, the offer is accompanied by a declaration that this indemnity

is founded on any reason of strict

justice, but is made as a special favor.

The Captain-General of Cuba, in his capacity as the representative of Great Britain, should be immediately and properly adjusted. It has been the policy of the government of that country to prosecute the full development of those feelings of mutual friendship between the people of the two countries, so natural in themselves and so conducive to a common interest. Any serious injury to the friendly relations between the United States and Cuba, would be equally injurious to both.

These feelings are very strong, and do much harm.

These feelings, I am gratified to see, are growing, and the pending controversy between the two countries, in relation to the questions of justice, is being

settled.

It is not probable, in their chances which I need not enumerate.

The mission to Spain has been intrusted to a distinguished citizen of Kentucky, who will proceed

to Madrid without delay, and make another and a

final attempt to obtain justice from that government.

Spanish officials, under the direct control of the

captain-general of Cuba, have insulted our national

flag, and, in repeated instances, have from time to

time inflicted injury on the persons and property

of our citizens. These have given birth to numerous claims against the Spanish government, the merits

of which have been fully discussed by our

representatives. Notwithstanding this, we have not arrived at any practical result in any single instance,

but we may except the case of the Black Warrior

under the late administration; and that presented

an opportunity, as a character as would have justified

a similar resort to war. All our attempts

to restrain others have been

unavailing.

The frequent and oft-recurring changes in the Spanish ministry, have been employed as reasons for delay. We have been compelled to wait, again and again, until the new minister should have had time to investigate the justice of our claims.

Even when we have demanded the Cuban

claims, in which more than a hundred of our

countrymen directly interested, have furnished no exception. These claims were for the refunding of

dues unjustly exacted from American vessels at

the Spanish custom-houses in Cuba, so long ago as the

year 1844. The principle upon which they rest

are so manifestly equitable and just, that after a period

of nearly ten years, in 1854, they were recognized by the Spanish government. Proceedings

were afterwards instituted to ascertain their amount,

and this was finally fixed according to their own

statement (with which we were satisfied), at the sum

of one hundred and twenty-eight thousand six hun-

drad and thirty-five dollars and fifty-four cents.

Just at the moment, after a delay of fourteen years,

when we had reason to expect that this sum would

be repaid with interest, we have received a prompt

offer to refund one-third of the amount, namely,

two thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight dol-

ars and forty-one cents, but without interest. If we

would accept this in satisfaction, the offer is accompanied by a declaration that this indemnity

is founded on any reason of strict

justice, but is made as a special favor.

The Captain-General of Cuba, in his capacity as

the representative of Great Britain, should

be immediately and properly adjusted. It has been the

policy of the government of that country

to prosecute the full development of those feel-

ings of mutual friendship between the people of the

two countries, so natural in themselves and so conducive to a common interest. Any serious in-

jury to the friendly relations between the United States and Cuba, would be equally injurious

to both.

These feelings are very strong, and do much

harm.

These feelings, I am gratified to

see, are growing, and the pending controversy be-

tween the two countries, in relation to the questions of justice, is being

settled.

It is not probable, in their chances which I need not enumerate.

The mission to Spain has been intrusted to a distinguished citizen of Kentucky, who will proceed

to Madrid without delay, and make another and a

final attempt to obtain justice from that government.

Spanish officials, under the direct control of the

captain-general of Cuba, have insulted our national

flag, and, in repeated instances, have from time to

time inflicted injury on the persons and property

of our citizens. These have given birth to numerous claims against the Spanish government, the merits

of which have been fully discussed by our

representatives. Notwithstanding this, we have not arrived at any practical result in any single instance,

but we may except the case of the Black Warrior

under the late administration; and that presented

an opportunity, as a character as would have justified

a similar resort to war. All our attempts

to restrain others have been

unavailing.

The frequent and oft-recurring changes in the Spanish ministry, have form of government; and a majority of the two votes—not the majority who may remain at home, from whatever cause—must decide the fate of an elevation. For this reason, we have the advantage of their own error, and we have the authority of the convention that failed to frame a constitution.

The convention, notwithstanding, proceeded to adopt a constitution unobjectionable in its general features, and providing for the submission of the slavery question to the vote of the people, which, in my opinion, they were bound to do, under the Ken-sas and Nebraska act. This was the all-important question which had alone convulsed the Territory; and yet the opponents of the lawful government, persisting in their first error, refrained from exercising their right to vote, and preferred that slavery should continue rather than surrender their revolutional Topeka organization.

A wiser and better spirit seemed to prevail before the first Monday of January last, when an election was held under the constitution. A majority of the people then voted for a Governor and other State officials, for a number of Congress and members of the State legislature. This election was warmly contested by the two political parties in Kansas, and a greater voice was given to that party which recuited. A large majority of the members of the legislature then elected were those which had previously refused to vote. The anti-slavery party were then in the ascendant, and the political power of the State was in their own hands. Had Congress admitted Kansas into the Union under the Emancipation constitution, the legislature might, at their first session, have submitted the question to a vote of the people, whether they would not have a convention to amend their constitution either on the slavery or any other question, and have adopted all necessary means for giving speedy effect to the will of the majority. Thus the Kansas question would have been immediately and finally solved.

Under these circumstances, I submitted to Congress the constitution thus framed, with all the officers already selected necessary to put the State government into operation, accompanied by a recommendation in favor of the admission of Kansas as a State. In the course of my public life

I have never performed an official act which, in the retrospect, has afforded me more heartfelt satisfaction. It is a duty which could have inflicted no possible injury on any human being, whilst it would within a brief period have restored peace to Kansas and bring it into the Union. In that event, the slave question would have been finally settled, according to the legally expressed will of a majority of the voters, and popular sovereignty would thus have been vindicated in a constitutional manner.

With my convictions of duty, I could have pursuued no other course. It is true that as an individual

I had expressed an opinion in favor of, and during the progress of, the convention. In favor of submitting the remaining clauses of the constitution, as well as that concerning slavery, to the people.

But, acting in an official character, neither myself nor any individual had the power to judge the constitutionality of the convention, and declare the constitution which it had framed to be nullity.

To have done this would have been a violation of the Kansas and Nebraska act, which left the people of the Territory "perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the constitution of the United States."

It would equally have violated the great principle of popular sovereignty, at the foundation of our institutions, to deprive the people of the power, if they thought proper to exercise it, of confiding to delegates elected by themselves the trust of framing a constitution, without requiring them to subject it to the trouble, expense, and delay of a second election.

It would have been in opposition to many precedents in our history, commencing in the very best age of the republic, of the admission of Territories as States into the Union, without a previous vote of the people approving their constitution.

It is to be lamented that a question so insignificant when viewed in its practical effects of the people of Kansas, whether decided one way or the other, should have kindled such a flame of excitement throughout the country. This reflection may prove to be a lesson of wisdom and of warning for our future guidance. Practically considered, the question is simply whether the people of that Territorial should first come into the Union and then change any provision in their constitution which did not agree to themselves, or accomplish the very same object by remaining out of the Union, and framing another constitution in accordance with their will? In either case, the result would be precisely the same. The only difference in point of on, shall have reached the anticipated number, of it will be presumed that, after their sad experience in relating the territorial, they will attempt to adopt a constitution in gross violation of the provisions of the act of Congress. During the session of 1858, much of the time of Congress was occupied with the question of admitting Kansas under the People's constitution. Again, nearly the whole of the last session was devoted to the question of its admission under the Emancipation constitution. Surely it is unreasonable to require the people of Kansas to wait, before making a third attempt, until the number of their inhabitants shall amount to ninety-three thousand four hundred and twenty. During this period the harmony of the State, as well as the happiness and welfare of the emigrant population, must be suspended.

Again, nearly the whole of the last session was devoted to the question of its admission into the Union. This was the all-important question, for a long time it was suspended by another agitation on the Kansas question. By waiting for a short time, and acting in due season, the people will glide into the Union without the slightest impediment.

This excellent provision, which Congress have applied to Kansas, ought to be extended and redacted applicable to all Territories which may hereafter seek admission into the Union.

Whilst Congress passes the undoubted power of admitting a new State into the Union, however small may be the number of its inhabitants yet this power ought not, in my opinion, to be exercised before the population shall amount to the ratio required by the act for the admission of Kansas.

If this had been previously the rule, the country which would have escaped all the evils and misfortunes to which it has been exposed by the Kansas question, in my opinion, it would not have given this rule a retrospective application, and denied a State to which it was entitled.

As far as I can see, the only difficulty in the way of the Territorial government in getting into the Union is the difficulty of finding a name for the new State. The name of "Utah" is proposed.

Immediately upon the formation of a new Territory, people from different States and from foreign countries rush into it, for the laudable purpose of improving their condition. Their first duty is to themselves to open and cultivate farms, to construct roads, to establish schools, to erect places of religious worship, and to devote their energies generally to the welfare of the wilderness and to lay the foundations of a future civilization. This is a task which requires a population of about forty thousand to both the east and west of the mountains, and is surely no hardship for embryo governors, senators, and members of Congress, to wait until the number of inhabitants shall equal those of a single congressional district. They surely ought not to be permitted to rush into the Union with a population less than one-half that of the large counties in the interior of some of the States. This was the condition of Kansas when it made application for admission into the Union.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to see that the people of the territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

the people of the States, are entitled to the same

protection and rights as the people of the States.

It is the duty of the Territorial government to

see that the people of the Territory are well treated,

and peace prevails throughout the

Territory. The people of the Territory, as well as

