

As a stop for travelers to the West from 1849–1861, a meal could sometimes be found by weary travelers and stage drivers when there was time between changing or refreshing the horses. A wood-burning iron stove can be seen through the doorway to a bedroom.